Students receive corruption complaints

By Fan Cheuk-wan in Beijing

STUDENT leaders in Beijing yesterday admitted they had received complaints of corruption and wastage of money donated from around the world.

Student representatives in Hong Kong told The Hong Kong Standard that they would withhold HK$1.6 million in donations, taken to Beijing last week, until they were assured the Beijing students had established a reliable way to administer their finances.

Mr Feng Congde, deputy commander of the students' General Office of Tiananmen Square, said the office had received complaints and warnings from students suspecting corruption and wastage of donations.

"The current financial management is very confusing. Corruption has been reported by students, but we have not collected concrete evidence," he said.

Mr Feng said it was difficult to supervise the use of donations since the students did not have an effective monitoring organization.

"There was no clear record of the money used to purchase materials and food. Some students failed to provide receipts," he said, adding that thousands of yuan were spent without proper records.

To eliminate the risk of corruption, he suggested overseas donors use money raised by materials for the students instead of sending cash. He said the financial department of the General Command Office would set up a supervisory group.

Mr Feng said the office had raised 125,384 yuan (HK$220,000) since May 24 from citizens in Beijing, but the students needed at least 50,000 yuan each day.

The office had only received 4,000 yuan from the Autonomous Federation of Beijing University Students, he said.

Union to maintain operations on the square.

"I don't know the whereabouts of a large part of the donations given to the Autonomous Federation of Beijing University Students and it has made no financial report to the students at the square," he said.

A delegation sent by the Hong Kong Federation of Students to Beijing last Friday took the HK$1.5 million raised by the federation and the April Fifth Movement, and another HK$370,000 raised by the Hong Kong Affairs Society.

But Miss Hella S Y Hal, deputy secretary-general of the Hong Kong Federation of Students, said: "The Beijing students' organization is rather confusing and we did not meet any financial administrators from the Autonomous Federation of Beijing University Students."

Miss Hal said the Beijing students now had a greater need for materials and daily necessities than cash. Her delegation took 23 tents and 200 sleeping bags for students at the square.

Meanwhile, some fundraisers in Hong Kong plan to continue sending money to China even after the Tiananmen Square demonstration ends.

They have raised 71 million so far, which $200,000 was sent to the students in the square last week. Another $500,000 was taken to the capital yesterday by a member of the students' federation after a call for help.

Tents set up for new Viet arrivals

By Pamela Ngai

TENTS are to be erected on Stonecutters Island to accommodate boat people.

A measure was part of an emergency package to cope with the latest wave of Vietnamese boat people arriving in Hong Kong.

TENTS have been erected in the Whitehead Detention Centre in Sha Tin but this would be the first time they had been used on Stonecutters Island.

Refugee Co-ordinator, Mr Mike Hanson, yesterday told members of the Overseas Security Panel that additional tents would be erected at Whitehead to boost the camp's capacity.

Whitehead yesterday held 3,376 boat people, already above the official capacity of 4,000.

Another measure was to advance the conversion of Lo Wu army camp to boat people accommodation from the end of June to next week.

But the whole package would only provide 3,000 extra places, which could be filled within a week if arrivals continued at the present rate.

Councillor Mr Hui Yin-fai said after the meeting that they had been told the Government had no other accommodation available.

The Government had opted for tents because they were readily available, Mr Hui said.

They were told the Government had to live from day to day in coping with the Vietnamese influx, he said.

Security Branch officials would have to work out further emergency plans for next week, he said.

Mr Hui said councillors were annoyed and frustrated at not being able to do anything about the situation.

"It's not the cost alone, but we just don't have any more accommodation whatever for them," he said.

Turning to violence at refugee camps, Mr Hui said he was very worried, especially in view of the proposed changes to speed up procedures to deal with appeals from boat people who had been refused refugee status.

"If they fail in their appeal, they will have nothing more to lose because they know their destination is back to Vietnam. I think more violence will ensue," he said.

He said the Government might have to take a serious look at whether a particular group was creating trouble in the camps.

"There is a consistently difficult group. I suppose we have to call them 'report' and certainly we should take appropriate action to handle this group."

Mr Hui also said Overseas members would discuss at their Friday night meeting if they agreed that which summarised their views on the boat people issue.

"We will try our best to arm the Governor with information that truly reflects the views of Hong Kong people before he goes to the Geneva conference," he said.

China loan frozen by unrest fears

By Lotte Chow of our Business Desk

A HK$500 million loan to China's state-owned oil refining company has been shelved by a consortium of US and Japanese banks worried by the country's current political instability.

In a move that reflects sinking foreign confidence, a US-Japanese banking group has suspended HK$86 million worth of loans to China Petrochemical Corporation, a state-owned refinery operation.

It marks a setback in China's vast modernisation campaign, which had drawn investments of HK$15 billion in more than 500 projects from the Japanese, and another HK$25 billion from US enterprises investing in 600 joint ventures.

"It's a sensitive situation, and I don't want to comment on it at this time," said a Hong Kong-based official of Dai-ichi Kangyo Bank, one of the possible lenders in the consortium. He asked his name be withheld.

The consortium, consisting of six or seven members, includes Morgan Guaranty Trust, the Industrial Bank of Japan, Dai-ichi Kangyo Bank, the Long Term Credit Bank of Japan, all of which have branch offices in Hong Kong.

Earlier this month, the banking group reached an agreement with China to lend money to the Beijing-based petrochemical company. The firm has 40 major refineries in China and about 500,000 workers.

Under the agreement, the loans would have been made for seven years and carry an interest rate of several percentage points higher than the London interbank rate.

But since the news of massive student protests broke, the finance group has frozen the loans, says Kyodo News Service.

However, the freeze is said to be temporary, and the US and Japanese banks are reported to be taking a wait-and-see attitude.

China Petrochemical officials could not be reached for comment yesterday.

Established in 1983, the operation has 72 subsidiaries throughout China. Its registered capital and assets are HK$4.1 billion while total sales are HK$71 billion.

US investors are taking a wait-and-see approach before making any major changes to their business strategies in China, commented a Beijing director of the US-China Business Council.

"My opinion is that everybody is waiting and watching, continuing on the assumption that it is business as usual," said Mr John Frisbie.

He said foreign corporations want to see if any changes occur in the Chinese leadership, or if there is any shift in China's policy towards foreign investment after six weeks of student upheaval.

But Mr Frisbie said it is not the worst scenario for a businessman's point of view - violent clashes involving troops.

Japan's Foreign Minister Mr Sosuke Uno said Tokyo was closely monitoring events in China but was otherwise holding firm to its China policy.

Chinese authorities had previously insisted the open door policy would not change.

But the setback in the Japanese-US loan comes as trade between China and Japan is already suffering from an anti-inflation security programme initiated by Beijing in March.

"If Zhao Ziyang is out, there will be less encouragement for foreign investment," an analyst at Nomura Research Institute had said.

The Hang Seng Index rose steadily to just over 2865, up more than 70 points or 2.67 percent. Futures also surged, June 141 points and August 136.

"It looks as if the market was in an over-sold position and is trying to make its way back up," a broker said. "If there is no bloodshed in Beijing, looks as though we'll probably have a nice, slow upward movement."

Statue of Democracy rekindles the struggle

A 10-METRE Statue of Democracy, similar to the Statue of Liberty, is being erected at Tiananmen Square by students who have occupied the square for 16 days.

Meanwhile, students insisting on a marathon sit-in protest are facing a leadership crisis after Miss Chai Ling resigned as commander of the group leading the protest in the square.

An activist said the Beijing students had lost control when tens of thousands of students from all parts of China flooded into the city after the imposition of martial law.

"The non-Beijing students now become the majority on the square and they even override the decision of the Beijing students," he said.

An umbrella coalition of students, workers and people's autonomous groups in Beijing was formed to amend its proposal to ask the students to quit the square today to June 30 after opposition from non-Beijing students.

Currently, about 80 percent of students staying in the square are from other provinces and cities, while the remaining 3,000 Beijing students preferred to evacuate from the square to better deploy human and material resources in campuses for reorganisation of future movements," said the student activist.

The Statue of Democracy is the result of four days of the central committee of the Central Academy of Fine Arts.

Some students believe the statue will help keep morale high on the square, while the remaining 3,000 Beijing students preferred to evacuate from the square to better deploy human and material resources in campuses for reorganisation of future movements," said the student activist.

Tens of thousands of people were assembling early this morning to witness the erecting of China's first non-official sculpture in the square.

"The government will not dare to pull down the statue which is the symbol of democracy, otherwise it'll arouse greater discontent from the people," a student leader said.

None of the student leaders such as Wang Dan, Wu'er Kaixi and Chai Ling appeared in Tiananmen Square yesterday.

Bush unveils sweeping arms reduction proposal

BRUSSELS: President

George Bush announced a major shift in US defence policy at the Nato summit yesterday, proposing a 20 percent cut in US combat troops in Europe and negotiated limits on aircraft and tanks.

Mr Bush told a news conference at the headquarters of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (Nato), where he had joined other Western leaders for a summit marking the 40th anniversary of the alliance, that he was proposing a 275,000 troop ceiling for both the United States and the Soviet Union in Europe.

Under the proposal the Soviets would have to withdraw 325,000 troops back to the Urals, the president said. The US would withdraw about 20,000 troops, 20 percent of US combat forces in Europe but only about 10 percent of the total of about 325,000 American troops in the continent.

Mr Bush's troop cutting is 75,000 men lower than the most recent Soviet proposal on conventional forces presented earlier this month, which called for US and Soviet strength in Europe to fall to 350,000 by 1997. Mr Bush called for the cuts to be negotiated quickly and completed by 1993.

" Eyes wide open and here we go now, on the offensive," Mr Bush told reporters after presenting his plan to Nato leaders, with a proposal that is good and tests whether the Soviets will move toward balance or whether they insist on retaining an unacceptable conventional force imbalance."

Asked if his disarmament plan would speed up the prospect of a super-power summit, Mr Bush responded, "I hadn't thought of it ... in this connection, but I would not rule it out. We'll see how it's digested in Moscow, I hope favourably."

A senior administration official told reporters that Mr Bush sent a letter outlining his proposals to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on Sunday.

Acknowledging his administration "has taken a little bit of a hammering" for not matching Mr Gorbachev's recent arms control initiatives, Mr Bush said the Soviet response to the ideas he presented could determine whether the Kremlin is interested in arms reduction or in rhetoric.

Mr Bush challenged the reorganisation of future movements," said the student activist.

At the summit's formal opening ceremony, Nato Secretary General, Manfred Wörner said that the North Atlantic Treaty had brought the longest period of peace in Europe since Roman times.

He urged Nato to seize the opportunities presented by changes in the East-West bloc, which he said represented a triumph for Western values.

The East is turning to the West - 150 years after the Communist Manifesto, communism has manifestly failed ... The point is, we would have known it, it is coming to an end," Mr Wörner said.

But he warned the leaders against complacency.

"Even with the most optimistic outcome of developments in East-West relations, we will have to wait for many years to come a formidable and unpredictable military power as our neighbour."

$26m dilemma how to distribute donations to students

By CHRIS YEUNG and JOHN TANG

HONGKONG supporters of the democratic movement in China are facing a serious dilemma: How to spend or distribute the $26 million which has flooded in to help mainland students.

They are also anxious to know whether funding the activities of mainland students will be considered as supporting "counter-revolutionary" activities by Beijing.

A prominent Hongkong barrier late last week made a secret delivery of $150,000 in cash to student leaders at Tiananmen Square.

The delivery is only a fraction of the donations which have taken various forms of various fund-raising campaigns by surprise, and which continue to arrive.

Mr Daniel Fung, an executive member of the Bar Association, agreed to act as a courier for the Hongkong Alliance in Support of the Patriotic Democratic Movement in China.

He disclosed last night that he had handed the money to a student leader on Friday.

"It wasn't clandestine but we didn't want to publicise it before the fact. The fear was that there might be difficulty in getting the money through."

Mr Fung said that he had considered calling off the money drop at one point, after Chinese leaders accused "a very small number of people" of being "counter-revolutionary".

A number of other personal deliveries — comprising cash and supplies such as tents, sleeping bags, food and dried goods worth about $1 million — have been made by student representatives in recent days.

But yesterday, a delegation from the student body decided to hold back a cash delivery to the students in Beijing, following claims of corruption and misuse of funds among student leaders.

Last night, the Alliance met to discuss details of a trust fund to be formed this week to manage and use the money which has been placed in a bank account.

The Alliance has collected more than $12 million through sponsorship of the marathon concert at the Royal Hongkong Jockey Club on Saturday.

The rest of the $26 million collected has mainly been raised by various groups including the Hongkong Federation of Students (HKFS), April 5 Action, the left-wing Federation of Education Workers, and the Federation of Trade Unions.

The HKFS has set up the China Democratic Fund, which has reached the $10 million mark, and is considering merging it with the Alliance's fund.

Secretary-General of the HKFS, Mr Andrew To Kwan-tung, said the group was considering whether to set up an office in China, possibly in Shanghai, to coordinate delivery of necessities to the students.

The office, to be manned by mainland students, would also function as an information centre to promote

20pc cut in forces proposed by Bush

Hopewell abandons $3.8 billion rights issue

HOPEWELL Holdings yesterday called off Hopewell's $3.8 billion rights issue because shareholders were being asked to pay $2.60 for new shares which can be bought in the market for just $2.475.

When the recent rights issue was announced in April the shares were trading at $3.30.

The Hang Seng Index rose 79.34 points to 2,845.01 yesterday, but it has still fallen 14 per cent over the past two weeks.

The underwriters decided to call off Hopewell's $3.8 billion rights issue because shareholders were being asked to pay $2.60 for new shares which can be bought in the market for just $2.475.

When the recent rights issue was announced in April the shares were trading at $3.30.

Hopewell managing director Gordon We had promised to take up 60 per cent of the new shares and yesterday he claimed most of the 13 underwriters had wanted to go ahead, but that nervous sub-underwriters had persuaded them to call it off.

"Most of the underwriters said they did not want to see a lot of dead bodies floating around," he said.

The stock market received a boost yesterday with the news that three sites auctioned by the Government were bought for prices in line with analysts' expectations.

The sites on sale were relatively small — two have been earmarked for industrial or warehouse use while the third is a low-density residential plot in the New Territories — and raised just $200 million for the Government.

The two industrial sites were snapped up by local tycoon Robert Ng, head of the Sino Land property group.

"We look beyond 1997, and even the political movement in Beijing could not affect our confidence in Hong Kong," he said.

Pressure to extend Basic Law talks

By CHRIS YEUNG

EXECUTIVE members of the Basic Law Consultative Committee (BLCC) will meet this week to decide whether to seek an extension to the consultation period, which was suspended due to the political uncertainties in China.

The 19-member committee will meet on Saturday to discuss extending the five-month consultation period, scheduled to end in July.

Should it seek an extension, the final decision would rest with the Chinese National People's Congress (NPC) standing committee.

"Even the drafters cannot decide it," he said.

A number of local drafters, however, maintained the five-month-long consultative exercise needed to be lengthened to allow for more debate.

Left-wing trade unionist Tam Yiu-chung said: "It's absolutely necessary. A number of key provisions in the Basic Law draft have to be reconsidered by taking into account the recent student movement in China."

Apart from the political system, he said there was a lack of detailed provisions split between the two options of amendment or an outright repeal.

One source said the amendments now in the works were far from final and a repeal might stand if the limitations to the police's power could not be satisfactorily legislated.

All members recognised the law's value in combatting crime before it was actually committed, the source said. "But there must be some limitations if you really want better protection for the rights of individuals," the source said.

It is hoped that the new law will be accompanied by a schedule of offences such

Peng Zhen challenges Deng rule

From WILLY WO-LAP LAM in Beijing

A STRONGMAN in China's Old Guard has come out to challenge the supremacy of senior leader Deng Xiaoping.

Retired law and order advocate, Mr Peng Zhen, was shown on television yesterday defending Mr Deng's decision to impose martial law on Beijing.

But he dissociated himself from the hard line Mr Deng has taken on the student movement, describing the students' motive as "good, pure, wholesome and constructive..."

Mr Peng's sudden emergence is interpreted as a signal that the 66-year-old leader, whose health is better than that of Mr Deng 84, is seeking to replace Mr Deng as the supreme patriarch of the party.

As Mr Peng was shown on television, a special meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee failed to agree at a unanimous verdict on the mistakes allegedly made by General Secretary Zhao Ziyang in handling the student movement.

Members of the party's Central Committee were divided over whether to brand Mr Zhao and his associates as a "counter-revolutionary" and "anti-party" clique.

tiological People's Congress (NPC), of which he was a past chairman.

The incumbent chairman, Mr Wan Li, is now in Shanghai reportedly under house arrest.

Mr Peng supported Mr Deng's stand that the student movement had given rise to socio-political turmoil.

Yet he also expressed views on the student movement and on the political process that are opposed to those of Mr Deng.

The former NPC chairman began his speech, entitled "United Thoughts Through the Constitution and the Law," by defending Mr Deng's assertion that the student movement was an instance of "social turmoil".

Defending Mr Deng's decision to impose martial law, Mr Peng pointed out that "an extremely small minority of conspirators have taken advantage of the student movement to create social turmoil".

He said the constitution had conferred upon the State Council the authority to declare martial law on parts of the nation's cities and provinces.

But Mr Peng also noted that "the motive of the students' rallies is good, pure, wholesome and constructive" and that the students' aim was to overcome the mistakes and shortcomings of the work of the party and Government and to improve the affairs of state and the social enterprises.

Analysis said he had subtly tried to build a bridge to the students as well as to various social sectors who support the campus activists.

Throughout his speech, Mr Peng has sought to emphasise the primacy of the rule of law.

"We must unite our thoughts with facts as basis

Crisis as flood of boat people worsens

By FIONA MACMAHON

The arrival yesterday of 863 boat people in a fleet of 21 boats — the biggest single-day influx so far this year — signals a new crisis for Hongkong.

The Government is faced with its most serious accommodation crisis, with refugee officials scrambling to find space to house the 1,591 boat people who have been detained in the past two days.

For now all the new Vietnamese arrivals will be housed in a tent at Whitehead detention centre or on

For now all the new Vietnamese arrivals will be housed in a tent at Whitehead detention centre or on almost three times the number in May last year and more than 3,000 above Government predictions.

Only three weeks ago the Government bowed to local opposition and decided not to proceed with plans to use a disused housing estate — Four Seasons Estate in Tsuen Wan — for the Vietnamese refugees, thereby freeing Shamshuipo as a detention centre to house the massive influx.

They have managed to juggle the Vietnamese and cram people into camps thereby freeing Shamshuipo Refugee Co-ordinator Mike Hanson said this had to be done because the Government had run out of accommodation plans.

but the crisis is such that the 3,000 places have only provided a temporary respite.

The Government's failure to implement plans as those of the Four Seasons Estate two weeks ago means that it has to fall back on what are unsuitable accommodation plans.

Mr Hanson hedged the question of whether tents were a good way to house people.

"We are running out of accommodation and have to react quickly," he said.

Government to amend loitering law

By JACQUELINE LEE

THE GOVERNMENT has bowed to pressure to amend the controversial loitering law, which civil libertarians say infringes an individual's right to remain silent.

Amendments being drafted by the Legal Department will shift the burden of proof to the police to show he has reason to suspect a person's behaviour before charging him or her with a loitering offence.

Under current legislation, the onus is placed on the suspect to explain his presence to the police. Those who fail to give a satisfactory account on the spot will face prosecution.

The amendment follows a review requested 15 months ago by the former Chief Justice, Sir Denys Roberts, and the former Attorney-General, Mr Michael Thomas, to pinpoint loopholes in the loitering law.

A nine-member task force, led by Executive and Legislative Councillor Mrs Rosanna Tam Wong Yick-ming, was formed under the Law Reform Commission (LRC) in February last year to examine the contentious provision.

Critics have seen the legislation, which compels a person found loitering by police in a public place to explain his presence, as a powerful weapon in crime prevention.

But lawyers have criticised the law as infringing the common law right of a suspect to remain silent and have asked for its abolition.

Concern has also been raised about possible abuse of the law by police. It is feared that once it is made an offence to refuse to provide information, people who are not articulate and who are afraid of the police could be taken advantage of.

The LRC sub-committee has the option to either abolish or amend the law, or retain the provision as it is.

Sources said the group, comprising crime-fighters and legal professionals, was 與天安門事件同一轍

【本報訊】中共炮制和散佈式大民主運動的陰謀，以公証的證據，與一九八九「六四天安門事件」有出一轍。一九八九「六四天安門事件」，中共出動軍隊，向和平示威的學生、市民開槍，造成大量傷亡。而此次的「六四天安門事件」，中共同樣出動軍隊，向和平示威的學生、市民開槍，造成大量傷亡。這兩次事件，都是中共為了維護其獨裁統治，而對和平示威的學生、市民進行的血腥鎮壓。這兩次事件，都是中共對人權的嚴重侵犯，都是對國際公義的嚴重挑戰。我們呼籲中共停止鎮壓，釋放所有被關押的學生、市民，並對鎮壓行為進行公正調查和嚴正處理。
